

Navigating the new Learning Link

On 1 April 2026 NGA is launching a brand-new Learning Link platform designed to make it easier to find, access and manage your learning. Key improvements include:

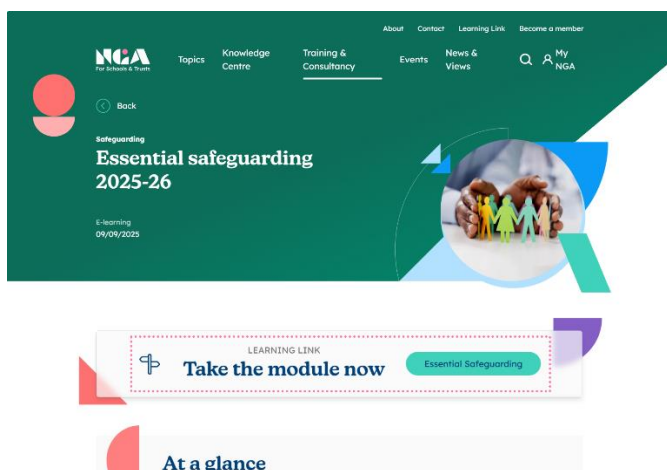

- Quicker and easier access to modules
- Full integration with the NGA website and your user profile
- The ability for account managers to allocate learning to their boards
- More agile content, so guidance stays current and up to date

Read on for a step-by-step guide to accessing the new platform for a preview of how you will access the new platform.

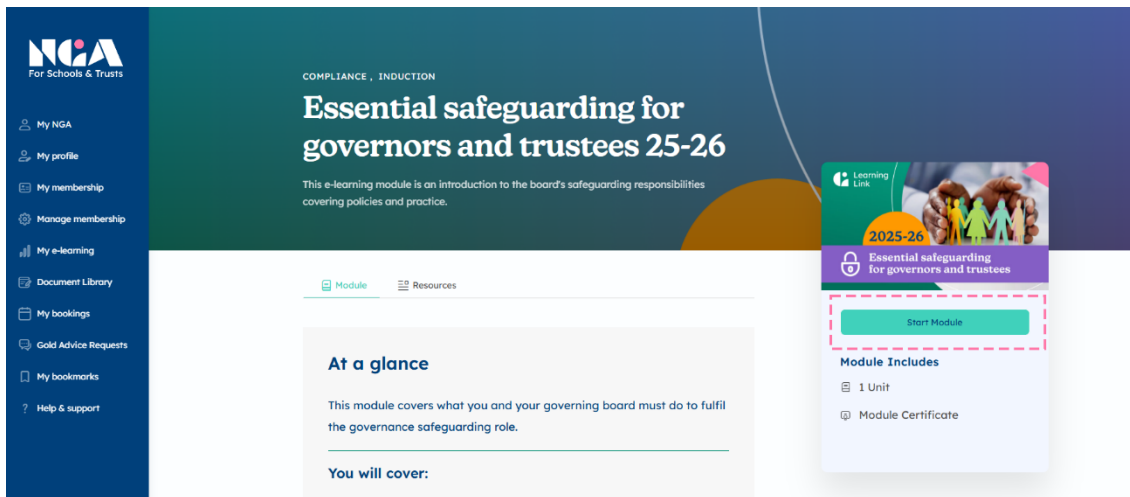

What you need to do

From Wednesday 1 April you will need to log in via My NGA at the top right of nga.org.uk. In our training directory you can filter your Training Type to 'E-learning' and by 'Topic', or simply browse to find a module that suits you.

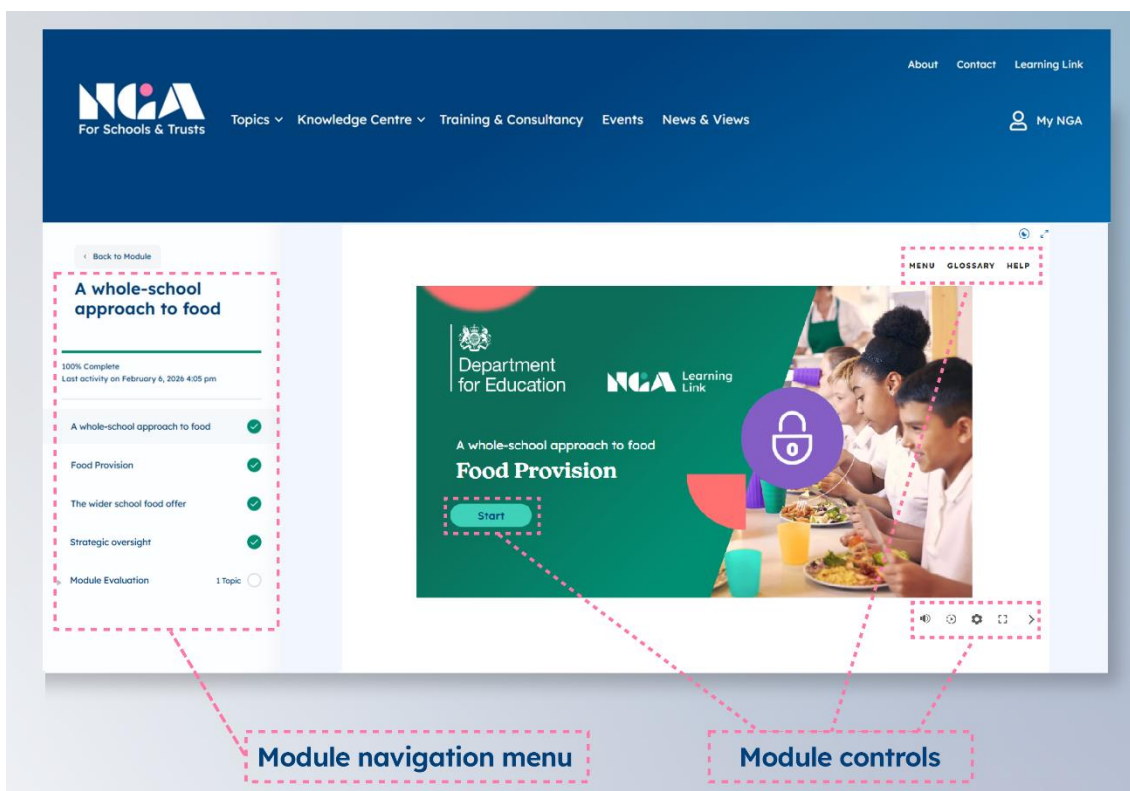

Clicking on the module tile will take you to its landing page, where you can read more about each module in-depth.

If you decide to complete this e-learning, click on 'Take the module now' to go straight to the module.

Click 'Start Module' to begin. If you are partway through a module or want to revisit it after completing it, you can return to it from this page. This page is also where you will be able to download your certificate after completion.

This module page will look familiar: with the usual player and module controls in the main window (pictured on the right). There is also a module navigation menu to help you move between units.

As you complete each unit, it will be ticked off. Click 'Proceed' at the end of each unit to continue to the next unit or complete the module.

Once finished, remember to download your certificate.

You can also access your learning - including any modules allocated to you by your governance professional - in your My NGA account under 'My e-learning'.
